

INFORMATION LETTER

In today's world, which is plagued by global challenges, the need for international cooperation is becoming increasingly important. Countries around the world are facing a variety of problems, from climate change and environmental crises to pandemics, economic instability, and military conflicts. In the face of such global challenges, there is a need for joint efforts and exchange of experience to find effective solutions. That is why the initiative to organize a roundtable discussion on "International Cooperation in the Face of Global Challenges" is of particular relevance. This event opens a platform for discussing the most important issues related to international cooperation and facilitates the exchange of ideas and views of young activists. Passionate young people demonstrate their commitment to developing cooperation at the international level, realizing that only through joint efforts can positive changes in the world be achieved. This roundtable provides an opportunity not only to discuss current issues, but also to work together to find constructive solutions and develop cooperation strategies. Thus, measures aimed at supporting it in the face of global challenges are essential for creating a stable and expansive world. The initiative of students and scientists is part of this process and reflects the importance of young people's active participation in shaping the future of the planet.
